

MBA Consulting Projects (MCP)

What is an MBA Consulting Project?

An opportunity for organizations to receive quality consulting services from motivated, highly qualified and experienced MBA students.

What can I expect?

High-caliber MBA students to address and propose solutions to problems or issues of importance within your organization.

Does the project team have experience?

The average MBA students' full-time work experience is 6-7 years! Small teams of students are supervised by a Telfer School of Management professor who is an experienced management consultant, member of CMC-Canada.

What constitutes an acceptable project?

Projects of importance to the organization, which require research and analysis, and which are multi-disciplinary in nature. For example: development of a business plan, benchmarking exercise, evaluation of a new product or service offering.

How many hours will I get?

Each student is expected to spend the equivalent of twelve hours per week over four months on a project. Teams of three to five students are normal.

Will it cost me anything?

Students earn academic credits towards their degree therefore there is only a nominal fee of $500 for private for-profit companies and government departments and agencies and $250 for not-for-profit organizations. In addition, MCP clients are expected to cover expenses related to the project, as agreed upon with the project team.

What do I really gain?

- ✓ Innovative practical solutions to organizational needs and challenges, provided by skilled, motivated and knowledgeable talent.
- ✓ Opportunity for early evaluation of potential employees.

What do I have to provide?

- ✓ A motivating and challenging project
- ✓ Time to discuss issues with project team, and provide feedback on progress reports
